This topographic map depicts the Parowan Valley region in Utah, highlighting a proposed route for the Big Water Tunnel. The route is marked by a thick red line that begins near Black Rock in the north, passes through Read, Murdock, and Milford, then follows the valley floor through Minersville, Parowan, and Panguitch, before ending near Richfield. The map features contour lines indicating elevation, with major peaks such as South Twin Peak (6427') and Granddick Peak (7661') labeled. Key geographical features include the Wah Wah Valley, Parowan Valley, and the Big Water Tunnel project area. Major roads are shown, including US-89 and US-12, and various towns and settlements are marked. The map also shows the location of the proposed tunnel relative to the existing Big Water Tunnel and the Big Water Reservoir.
